Description

Arthur Gué, born into a family from Poitiers, succeeded his father ahead of a chromolithography company, which he sold in 1903 to study under Luigi-Loir in Paris. In 1906, he made his debut at the Salon des Artistes Français, where he immediately received an honorable mention. In 1910, the Galerie Georges Petit organized his first solo exhibition. In 1913, the same gallery dedicated another exhibition to him. His success enabled him to join the Society of Mountain Painters, the Winter Salon, and the International Society of Watercolorists. Unsigned, bears the studio sale stamp on the reverse as well as a note on the bevel of the panel: "supplies 1911"
