Description

Large polychrome jade Guanyin statuette - China, Beijing, circa 1920
Origin: China, Beijing
Period: Circa 1920 (early 20th century)
Material: Carved natural jade
Height: 22 cm (without the base)
Base: Included, carved wood (removable)
Description
A beautiful statuette depicting Guanyin, the Buddhist goddess of Compassion, carved from natural jade in delicate shades of celadon, honey, and lavender. Standing, she holds a sacred vase from which rises a ruyi branch, a symbol of peace, longevity, and prosperity. The sculpture features particularly meticulous work on the drapery, hairstyle, and ornaments, highlighting the stone's natural variations. The quality of the carving and the balance of the composition attest to the craftsmanship of early 20th-century Beijing
