Louis TESSON 1820-1870 He trained in the studio of the great painter Alexandre-Gabriel Decamps (1803-1860), a leading figure of the French Orientalist school. Under this influence, Louis Tesson developed a personal style in which precise draftsmanship was combined with a warm, luminous palette. Beginning in 1841, Louis Tesson exhibited regularly at the Paris Salon, where he presented his works until 1867. There he exhibited seascapes, landscapes, genre scenes, watercolors, and Orientalist compositions that captivated art lovers with their realism and atmosphere. This delicate oil on canvas by Louis Tesson is a charming genre scene, (drawing on the Dutch and Flemish traditions, but interpreted with 19th-century Romantic sensibility) in which the artist celebrates the simple joys of childhood
