Description

Large early 19th-century console table, featuring two curved shelves made of light solid oak, contoured on three sides and richly decorated with exquisite Regency-style carvings. It rests on four finely carved, arched legs with moldings finished in volutes, connected by two highly molded crossbars that follow the curve of the console and are covered in cane, as is the upper part of the back. The console is in perfect condition, as is the cane work, and is topped with its original 25 mm-thick red Flanders marble, which is molded around the edge with a "bec de corbin" molding. A console table of exceptional quality in cabinetmaking.
