Description

This charming Hispano-Moorish ceramic bowl from the 17th century features a metallic-hued design; the center is adorned with a bird in flight surrounded by plant motifs, while the rim is decorated with groups of dots in a beautiful shade of coppery lustre. There are traces of scratches as well as some slight wear from rubbing. The piece also bears an old repair made with staples (see photos), although this is almost invisible when viewed from the front.
