Description

Empire-style mahogany filing cabinet - 12 drawers lined with green leather - Gilded bronze - early 20th century
A rare and elegant Empire-period mahogany filing cabinet, originally designed for organizing documents, prints, or correspondence. Its sober and monumental design is enhanced by rich ornamentation of chiseled and gilded bronze, typical of the First Empire. The front features twelve drawers lined with green leather, arranged in two columns of six, each framed by a gilded frieze with fine engraving and fitted with a brass pull knob. The drawers are removable and offer ample storage space, ideal for documents, files, or collections. The side posts are adorned with bronze moldings featuring palmette and laurel wreath motifs. The top rail features an elegant
