Description

A Louis XV-style wall-mounted console table, curved at the front and sides, rests on two curved legs with double scrolls adorned with stylized foliage; the crossbar is composed of wrought-iron volutes held in place by clamps. Exquisitely crafted wrought iron in antique green with gilded accents. Curved Brocatelle marble with a "bec de corbin" edge, 25 mm thick, sourced from the Chassal quarry in the Jura Mountains. Circa 1930. In perfect condition. L 101 cm - height 87 cm - depth 30 cm. Brocatelle marble owes its name to its resemblance to fabrics brocaded with gold, silver, or silk, known as brocades. In Chassal, these stones are generally yellow with purple veins or mixed, as seen here. Thank you to the SEMC (Société d'Études des Marbres et de leurs Carrières) for identifying this piece.
