Description

Pair of vintage sculptural "Shabatt," signed by Wainberg, 1960s. These striking metal pieces come from the Wainberg foundry, renowned for its mid-century metalwork, crafted with great skill and characterized by a spectacular, brutalist aesthetic. They are distinguished by their rough surface texture, featuring organic irregularities, and by their architecturally inspired openwork forms. Each candlestick is crafted from solid cast brass and features a warm patina. The body of each candleholder features expressive cutouts that frame a stylized menorah motif in relief. This lends the candleholders symbolic depth and visual appeal, while allowing light to shine through the form. The ribbed candle holders emphasize their artisanal and sculptural character. The interplay between the raw, brutalist texture and the refined symbolic details makes these candle holders both functional and highly decorative -- ideal for collectors of mid-century design, brutalist metal art, or Jewish-inspired decorative art. Perfect for creating an eye-catching display on a console table, dining table, or bookshelf, they bring --from "Mid-Century Modern" and modernist styles to eclectic and museum-inspired spaces--an aesthetic that is both bold and refined.
