Description

This small bronze sculpture titled Coucou and signed by Rosa Bonheur captures all the charm of a childlike scene caught in the moment: a young girl, standing confidently on her circular base, lifts a piece of fabric in front of her as if to hide and then reappear immediately in a game of silent mischief. The modeling of the face, the soft roundness of the cheeks, and the liveliness of the gaze suggest a vibrant innocence, while the textured hair subtly catches the light. The drapery seems animated by a slight movement, as if the child had just pulled the fabric toward her in a spontaneous gesture. The deep patina envelops the entire piece in an intimate presence, giving this small figure an unexpected emotional depth. The work, both simple and refined, captures a suspended moment where mischief becomes
