Description

The emperor embodies, poses, and ponders. He adorns, he illuminates, he sheds light. The painting would not be complete if one of his soldiers were not looking out the window, as if waiting for a signal, while the other watches his every move. The housekeeper invites him to sit on this as if to calm him down. Should the fire be turned off, or should the pot be left to boil? The original gold-leaf frame bears all the signs of age. It complements the blown glass and the original lithograph perfectly. Rare format and scene. 25x13.5 cm Shipping available (not included in the price)
