Description

We are at Place Bellecour in Lyon; the marshal is inspecting the troops. The meticulous pencil work creates a surprising perspective. The houses in the background are highlighted with embossed details. We see this technique used on the marshal as well. The graphite work is delicate and features minute details. The watercolor washes are applied in flat areas, thereby creating several "three-dimensional" scenes on different planes. The absence of shading further enhances the minimalist style. The uniform features the decorative motif. (32.5 x 24 cm) The rosewood frame, accented with boxwood fillet, further enhances the contrast. The blown glass is also original. A scene and characters rarely depicted. Delivery available (not included in the price).
