Description

A 19th-century Viennese Orientalist bronze lamp, signed by the famous Austrian bronze artist Franz Bergman, renowned for the finesse of his sculptures and the quality of his polychrome bronzes. This refined composition depicts a figure seated beneath a traditional thatched-roof pavilion, surrounded by architectural and decorative elements inspired by the Orient. The richness of detail--from the figure's drapery to the decorative motifs--attests to the remarkable craftsmanship of the Bergman workshop and the enthusiasm for Orientalism in the late 19th century. Both a work of art and a light fixture, this piece is a fine example of collectible Viennese bronzes, highly sought after for their quality of craftsmanship and decorative character.
