Description

A double-shelf lectern resting on a tripod base with a fluted shaft carved with a garland of flowers--a feature that is rarely seen. Its two articulated arms are fitted with candlesticks made of bronze that was once gilded. In the Louis XVI style, it dates from the mid-19th century, around 1860. Please note that the lectern has been refinished with several thick coats of varnish and is not height-adjustable. The bottom of the desk is 75 cm from the floor. We can arrange shipping within mainland France for EUR80.
