Description

In this composition, William Aguet (1892-1965) presents a poetic vision of the landscape in which reality is transformed into an almost dreamlike scene. The simplified shapes of the hills, the soft tones of blue, green, and mauve, and the luminous curves crossing the sky create a meditative and timeless atmosphere. Straddling the line between figuration and abstraction, the artist prioritizes the rhythm of the lines and the harmony of the colors over a faithful representation of nature. The brushwork is meticulous and even, giving the surface a vibrant texture that subtly animates the flat areas of color. This painterly style, combined with a delicate palette, reflects the influence of Post-Impressionism and Symbolism, while asserting a personal artistic language in which the
