Description

Louis XVI-style writing desk with drawers - Late 18th century (circa 1780-1790) An elegant rectangular writing desk in the neoclassical Louis XVI style, crafted from solid oak with a beautiful antique patina in shades of gold and brown. The large, spacious rectangular top features slightly molded edges and a weathered surface that bears the marks of time with authentic charm. The frieze is accented by two large front drawers with contrasting inlays and original (or period) brass handles. The simple, geometric lines typical of the style are accentuated by the straight, turned, and tapered front and rear legs, which end in truncated conical or spindle-shaped feet, featuring light fluting and a natural golden patina resulting from age. The solid oak frame, bearing clear signs of period craftsmanship, rests on an elegant
