Description

Italy 19th century: "Frontispiece to Salvator Rosa's Self-Portrait," pen-and-ink drawing on very fine paper, 13.5 × 12.5 cm (irregular), mounted in the corners with small tears and stains on a brittle and incomplete cardboard backing. Probably a draft frontispiece for a biography of the artist; it shows a soldier dressed in 17th-century style, seen from the back and holding a portrait framed behind various attributes: a book, a snuffbox, etc. The drawing is an interpretation of the self-portrait found in the Vasari Corridor in Florence.
