He was a student of Jules Lefebvre and Gustave Boulanger. Influenced by Jean Béraud, he focused in particular on the rendering of light to convey the bustle of Parisian life: his works are imbued with spontaneity, dynamism, and movement, giving viewers the sensation of participating in the scenes depicted and the activities enjoyed by the urban public of the Belle Époque. He also painted views of London, Melun, Vichy, and--in Switzerland, where he spent his final years--Geneva, Lausanne, and Bern. He was a member of the Société des artistes français and exhibited at the Salon from 1912 to 1914. He also created large decorative panels, notably a series of works adorning the casino in the city of Vichy. Museums : Paris, Melun.violondingres.fr
