Description

Magnificent 19th-Century Victorian Inlaid Burr Yew Marquetry Octagonal Coffee Table A superb and rare Victorian coffee table of octagonal form, circa 1880, exquisitely veneered in richly figured burr yew and finely inlaid throughout. The striking octagonal top features mirror-matched burr yew, displaying exceptional grain patterns and depth of color. A complex marquetry design forms a geometric star motif of triangles, inlaid with satinwood, boxwood, and contrasting timbers. The edge is finished with alternating yew and satinwood molding, featuring delicate satinwood stringing along the frieze. A central circular marquetry plaque unifies the design, set above inlaid rails. The table stands on four elegant, tapering legs, each finely inlaid and supported by inlaid quarter brackets, giving the piece a sculptural, architectural presence. The yew wood sides feature beautiful grain, with a rich, warm tone and a wonderful patina developed over time. The overall craftsmanship is of a very high standard, reflecting the refinement and understated elegance characteristic of the Victorian period. The table is in excellent condition. Both highly functional and visually striking, this low table is ideal for a library, study, sitting room, or refined contemporary office. It offers generous surface space while serving as a strong decorative focal point--a true statement piece for any interior that values fine 19th-century British craftsmanship, originality, and timeless style. An outstanding example of Victorian marquetry, this coffee table effortlessly combines intricate decoration with pure, sculptural form, and would make a superb centerpiece in either a traditional or a modern setting.
