Description

Oil on canvas. Venetian school, first half of the 18th century. The landscape, executed with skill, is reminiscent of the style of Bartolomeo Pedon (1665-1732), one of the most interesting landscape painters of the Venetian Baroque period. Rich in vegetation, the landscape frames a path in the center that leads from the woods toward the wide valley, where scattered farmhouses and a river in the distance can be seen; the landscape fades into bluish hues that blend into the sky. On the path in the foreground, several figures are moving: a woman carrying a jug on her head (a small pool of water can be glimpsed to the left) is conversing with a shepherdess sitting and resting, while her sheep graze nearby, and other shepherds pass along the path. The details of the vegetation, as well as
