Description

Oil on canvas depicting an angel in flight, holding the palm of martyrdom and accompanied by a putto wearing a laurel wreath. Set against a sky filled with clouds, the scene illustrates the Baroque iconography of spiritual victory, in which the palm symbolizes the triumph of the martyrs and the laurel wreath represents the heavenly reward. The composition is built around an upward movement, accentuated by the dynamic drapery, the widely spread wings, and the figures' gestures. The rendering of skin tones, the lighting effects, and the warm color palette reflect the influence of late 17th- or early 18th-century Italian painting. This is likely a fragment of a larger religious composition, intended to decorate a church or chapel, as was common during the Baroque period. The work
