Description

The bronze sculpture Yawning Hippopotamus, based on a design by Rembrandt Bugatti, is an iconic work of early 20th-century animal sculpture. This hippopotamus statue captures a moment of calm and power, symbolizing the quiet majesty of the animal kingdom. Created around 1910-1914, the subject--a hippopotamus with its mouth open in a monumental yawn--conveys the animal's serenity and power. Every fold and every form is modeled with sincerity and without artifice, revealing the sculptor's touch and the life imbued in the material.
