Description

S.W. Clifford (British, late 19th century) - Wooded Landscape with Waterfall. 92 x 61 cm. Oil on canvas, unframed. Signed lower left: «S.W. Clifford». S.W. Clifford was a British painter active in the second half of the nineteenth century, working within the tradition of the Romantic landscape as established by the English school. His work demonstrates a confident handling of atmospheric effects and a sensitivity to filtered light through dense vegetation, in keeping with the conventions of Victorian landscape painting. The painting depicts a wooded gorge through which a stream descends in cascades over moss-covered boulders, while in the background a lattice iron bridge crosses the torrent amidst overhanging trees. The composition is built in depth, with a shadowed foreground
