Description

A small open-fronted writing desk in rosewood, made in France in the early 20th century, featuring an elegant oval shape. The surface is embellished with still-life inlays in various woods, which create a refined decorative effect. The upper section features two side doors and a small central drawer topped by an open compartment, complemented by an openwork bronze balustrade that adds a touch of classic elegance. The lower section features a drawer in the base panel beneath the top, supported by four curved, truncated-pyramid-shaped legs connected by a shelf that is also inlaid. The hand-crafted and gilded bronze accents--including the vents, knobs, and feet--further enhance the piece's aesthetic appeal. The oak interior ensures sturdiness and durability, making this piece a perfect example of
