Description

An exceptional painting composed of a multitude of pieces of polychrome ceramic set into a mosaic, each element specifically created for this work by the artist. This high-relief composition, which is astonishing to say the least, is presented as a relief, edged with a wooden strip and mounted on a canvas backing. Two "strange" birds with decidedly stylized lines are depicted here, each perched on a small outcrop facing the other; these two protagonists of the scene seem to be conversing or sizing each other up. Although I have not identified the creator of this work--which must be one of the rarest design objects--I would like to point out that the artist's monogram is inscribed in the lower right corner. The back is "covered" with wine-colored felt. Note: For your information, this item comes
