Description

This work is executed with a thick, expressive application of oil paint; the layered strokes and textured impasto of color lend the landscape a strong visual intensity. The palette, vibrant and full of contrast, combines oranges, yellows, blues, and purples, suggesting an architectural or urban vision interpreted in an abstract key. The work as a whole recalls certain European Expressionist explorations from the mid-20th century. Signed and dated lower right. Marcella Fratelli was an Italian artist active in the 20th century, known for her floral compositions characterized by a highly textural painting style. Her work from the 1950s-1960s leans toward modern Expressionism, emphasizing an expressive use of color and texture. Her works reflect a search for balance between abstraction and formal
