Description

Empire/Restoration-era clock (early 19th century), made of bronze with a brown patina, depicting a highly refined bucolic and neoclassical scene. Main subject: A male figure dressed in an ancient-style tunic (representing a shepherd or a young hunter) leaning against the clock's base. To his left, at his feet, lies a hunting horn. A faithful dog tied with a bronze-carved rope, its gaze turned toward its master. A carved bird's nest at the top of the central body. Bas-relief beneath the dial depicting a delicate pastoral scene with figures and animals. Base adorned with a bas-relief depicting pastoral and hunting motifs surrounded by ribbons, resting on four bronze spindle-shaped feet. White enameled dial with Roman numerals and finely crafted period hands. Original wire movement visible on the
