Description

Sword of a Dragoon Officer, mounted hunter, or possibly a naval officer, from the Consulate and First Empire period. Cast brass hilt Pommel with faceted sides decorated with a foliage motif and topped by a prominent riveted knob. Fluted ebony tang, decorated in the middle with a brass ring featuring continuous plant motifs. Faceted tang, adorned in the center with pearls and ending at a right angle at the crossguard with a reinforcement. Guard plate decorated with a sun on a radiating background and a border adorned with 5 pearls; short, coiled quillon. Blade with a gray patina, straight with hollow sides and a flat back, chiseled one-third of the way up with trophies of arms and floral motifs on one side and a radiant sun on the other. These swords were very fashionable among dragoon officers, mounted
