Description

Largewooden sculpture depicting a chubby cherub or putto with curly hair, seated on a column and holding the drapery of his garment in his hands; a decorative element from a Baroque-style altarpiece, dating from the 17th century. This sculpture is in good overall condition and of superb quality. The column base is a later addition (19th century) and has been adapted for the cherub; the figure moves slightly on it. Please note: some damage, chips, and cracks in the wood, scratches and areas where the patina is missing, a few wormholes, and signs of age; please examine the photos carefully.
