Description

19th-century wood panel painting - Still Life with a Bouquet of Flowers - 109 × 83 cmAn important 19th-century decorative wood panel painting, depicting an elegant still life with a bouquet of flowers in a bronze vase resting on an entablature. The composition, particularly rich, features tulips, roses, peonies, irises, hyacinths, and various garden flowers, rendered with finesse and a luminous color palette. The background opens onto a romantic landscape enlivened by trees and distant architecture, lending depth and lightness to the whole. This decorative work, in the spirit of the grand floral compositions of the 18th and 19th centuries, was intended to adorn wood paneling or the interior decor of a bourgeois residence. This painting captivates with its large format, decorative refinement, and the quality of its
