Description

A draped necklace in 750/°° yellow gold (18 KT, eagle-head hallmark), featuring a series of openwork filigree motifs delicately set with natural fine pearls. The piece is a testament to remarkable goldsmithing, where the virtuosity of the gold wire is harnessed to create an ethereal, light, and exceptionally refined composition. Each element features a symmetrical design composed of filigree volutes and coils--a demanding technique that involves shaping and assembling very fine gold wires to create an openwork pattern of great finesse. The two fine pearls incorporated into each motif add a touch of softness and light while highlighting the delicacy of the design. The intermediate links ensure excellent flexibility, allowing the necklace to naturally follow the curve of the neck while maintaining an elegant scalloped effect. Its balance and lightness make it particularly graceful to wear. The ends are extended by a chain adorned with matching filigree motifs, ensuring a harmonious transition between the central section and the clasp. The clasp features a spring-ring closure, which is discreet and perfectly suited to this type of design. With its delicate design, use of fine pearls, and high-quality craftsmanship, this necklace evokes pieces from the late 19th or early 20th century--a period during which filigree experienced a true renaissance. It will appeal to lovers of antique jewelry seeking a refined, feminine, and easy-to-wear piece.
