Description

We present this antique Italian buffet, crafted from solid walnut and dating back to the late 19th century. This buffet features the typical characteristics of a storage cabinet designed to be used as a firewood holder, with understated and balanced lines that combine functionality and elegance. The front is dominated by a large central panel framed by raised geometric moldings, with natural wood grain that enhances the walnut. The side uprights feature distinctive fluted pilasters that culminate in small carved capitals at the top. This elegant decoration creates a refined visual accent and lends the piece a touch of elegance. The top opens to reveal a large internal compartment that can be used as a practical storage space for a variety of items. In period homes, it was used as an elegant indoor firewood
