Description

This ritual pipe bowl, carved in the round from polished stone, takes the stylized form of a waterbird, most likely a spotted duck (Aix sponsa), recognizable by the distinctive crest extending from the back of its head. The carving is clearly very old, most likely dating from the early 19th century. DIMENSIONS: 6.5 x 15.5 cm (without base); 11 x 15.5 cm (with base) PERIOD: early 19th century MATERIALS: stone
