Description

An elegant set of six Directoire-era chairs, combining clean lines with refined detailing. They rest on tapered legs and feature a slightly curved backrest, adorned with a carved medallion depicting a lyre--a hallmark of the Directoire style. The frame is made of light gray lacquered wood with a patina, revealing beautiful signs of age in places that lend the chairs their charm and authenticity. The seats are upholstered in a light salmon-colored fabric, in good condition, offering a harmonious contrast to the wood's patina. These chairs will look perfect around a large dining table, in a classic, country-chic, or contemporary interior, where they will add a touch of elegance. They are stable, sturdy, and ready for use. A beautiful set from the Directoire period, which has become difficult to find in such
