Description

"Portrait of a Woman" by Tsiku-Pezo N'Damvu (1939-1997) reflects the warm and vibrant artistic world of this Congolese painter, born in Boma and trained at the Academy of Fine Arts in Kinshasa. Her work frequently celebrates African women in their everyday lives, portraying them with dignity, grace, and quiet confidence. Painted in 1996, this portrait exemplifies her desire to celebrate a modern femininity that is firmly rooted in its own time while remaining connected to its cultural heritage. Elegantly reclining on a generously proportioned sofa, the young woman talks on the telephone with an air of relaxed self-assurance. The vivid pink tones of her dress and headscarf harmonize with the soft greens of the furniture, while her gold jewelry and the flower she delicately holds add luminous accents.
