Description

Alfred Pietercelie (1879-1955) is known for his luminous landscapes, in which he sensitively captures the charm of the Belgian countryside. Painted in 1927, this view of "La Zuen" reflects his interest in the effects of light, the reflections on the water, and the harmonious colors that bring nature to life throughout the seasons.The stream winding through the foreground guides the eye across the composition, where tree trunks are reflected in calm water with shades of blue, green, and white. Beyond the sun-drenched undergrowth, a few farmhouses appear discreetly among the foliage, bringing a human presence to this serene landscape. With broad, spontaneous brushstrokes, Alfred Pietercelie captures the full freshness of this rural scene, where light becomes the true subject of the work.Provenance: private
