Description

In "Abstract Composition," Gaston Bogaerts (1921-2022) creates a geometric space in which large blocks of bold colors--yellow, blue, green, pink, gray, and black--interlock with precision. The simple forms, with their sharp contours, create a subtle interplay of balance between vertical, horizontal, and diagonal lines, while the texture of the paint adds a tactile dimension to this deliberately minimalist composition. The absence of any figurative motifs invites the viewer to focus on the relationships between the colors, the volumes, and the overall rhythm of the work. A leading figure in geometric abstraction in Belgium, Gaston Bogaerts developed a visual language based on the simplicity of forms and the harmony of colors. His work explores the concepts of space, construction, and visual
