Description

This charming and original antique cigar cutter, dating from around 1900, features a whimsical shape reminiscent of a miniature barrel. Its finely crafted wooden body is adorned with gilded brass fittings.The cylindrical wooden body is carefully shaped to resemble a traditional barrel, giving the piece a unique sculptural and decorative character. The upper section, made of gilded brass, houses the cutting mechanism, creating an elegant contrast between the warmth of the wood and the golden sheen of the metal.This type of object was produced as a refined accessory for smokers, intended for private clubs, libraries, smoking rooms, hotels, and opulent residences at the turn of the 20th century. Beyond its practical function, its barrel shape makes this cigar cutter a beautiful decorative object that is sure to spark
