Description

A beautiful vintage rifle case from the 1950s, crafted from leather and designed for the safe storage and transport of a hunting rifle. The case features a traditional elongated shape and a sturdy construction, designed to protect the gun during travel or hunting trips. The exterior is covered in high-quality leather, which has developed a beautiful natural patina over the decades, giving the piece an authentic and elegant vintage character. This type of case was an essential part of traditional European hunting and sporting equipment, combining practical protection with the refined craftsmanship associated with country house and hunting culture. Today, this case is just as appealing as a collectible sports accessory or decorative object, particularly suited to a country home, a hunting lodge, a library, a sports
