Description

An important oil painting on canvas by the artist Pierre-Nicolas Huilliot, a refined 18th-century still-life painter. The work depicts a rich composition featuring an elegant vase of flowers, a table clock, bunches of grapes, and a precious yellow damask cloth, all arranged with great compositional balance and extraordinary decorative richness. The quality of the floral rendering, the refined depiction of surfaces, and the careful handling of light highlight the artist's full maturity and the characteristic style of 18th-century French painting. The painting is in excellent condition and represents an important example of 18th-century European still life.
