Description

Pair of gilded bronze candlesticks in the Louis XV style - Napoleon III period A charming pair of finely gilded bronze candlesticks, crafted during the Second Empire in the purest spirit of the Louis XV style. This elegant composition perfectly illustrates the Napoleon III era's taste for the fluid forms of the 18th century, rendered with high-quality chasing and rich ornamentation. Each candlestick features two candle arms with supple, asymmetrical lines, adorned with delicate scrollwork, acanthus leaves, and curling foliage. The candle sockets, finely molded and chiseled, rest on corollas of foliage that lend lightness and elegance to the ensemble. The central shaft, adorned with rocaille decoration, rises from a dynamic base where the interplay of curves and counter-curves is accentuated by warm gilding.

that highlights every detail of the sculpture. The piece as a whole attests to the remarkable craftsmanship of a bronze artist, characteristic of high-quality 19th-century productions. The two candlesticks rest on very elegant stands sheathed in antique braiding, which lend them a refined appearance while protecting the bases. This uncommon detail contributes fully to the charm of this pair. In excellent condition, these candlesticks will appeal to connoisseurs of decorative bronzes and period furniture. They will naturally find their place on a mantelpiece, a console table, or a reception table, where they will bring all the elegance and refinement of the grand interiors of the Second Empire. A beautiful pair of Louis XV-style candlesticks, combining rich ornamentation, delicate chiseling, and high-quality craftsmanship--ideal for complementing a classic interior or enhancing an eclectic decor imbued with charm and authenticity.
