Description

A rare set of original majolica floor tiles with a terracotta backing, dating from around 1830 and attributable to the "Fabbrica Privileggiata dei Colonnesei" manufactory, as documented by the oval mark stamped on the back of the tiles. The floor features a complete compositional structure of great value, consisting of: * a modular field decorated with stylized floral motifs, characterized by elegant plant elements and vibrant colors * a prominent central polychrome rosette, featuring a radial design of foliage and ornamental motifs, conceived as the visual focal point of the entire decorative scheme. This combination identifies the floor as a true "architectural ceramic carpet," typical of early 19th-century southern Italian production, blending decorative tradition with late
