Description

Electromagnetic clock by Maurice Favre Bulle (Besançon, 1920s); the openwork dial reveals the mechanism at its center, and the hands are made of blued steel. Shaped like a pillar, the exterior is lacquered with Asian-style motifs featuring figures, birds, and plants. The movement is not guaranteed to function and requires a battery. Minor defect: the dial bezel does not close properly. - On display at our 400 m² gallery in Lille; open by appointment.
