Description

Chinese Jade Pagoda Incense Burner Carved Chinese jade incense burner in the shape of a pagoda or temple, 20th-century piece. This decorative piece features highly intricate architecture, with a removable multi-tiered roof, carved columns, openwork patterns, floral details, and elements inspired by traditional Chinese temples. The green stone, similar to jade or hardstone, displays beautiful natural shades ranging from light green to a deeper green, with veins and variations that enhance the object's decorative character. The top lid is removable, revealing a hollow interior, which identifies it as an incense burner, a perfume burner, or a decorative covered container in the Asian style. A very beautiful piece of Asian art, ideal for a collection of jade, carved hardstone, Chinese
