Description

Blue Coral Sculpture of a Woman, 20th Century A 20th-century decorative sculpture, believed to be made of blue coral, depicting a seated female figure integrated into a naturalistic composition of rocks and a stylized tree. The piece depicts a woman seated beneath a finely carved tree, accompanied by a rock formation with a highly textured and openwork surface. The blue-gray hues, natural cavities, and organic appearance of the material give the piece a highly decorative and distinctive presence. The sculpture is mounted on a white, quartz-like mineral base, which in turn rests on a dark stone pedestal. The contrast between the blue of the main subject, the white crystalline base, and the dark pedestal particularly highlights the composition. A rare and original decorative object, ideal for a cabinet of
