Description

Pair of Art Deco bookends featuring foxes on green marble, early 20th century. A blend of practicality and ingenuity, this pair of bookends dates from the Art Deco period (1910-1939), a landmark era in early 20th-century design. Art Deco is defined as a movement that blends sophisticated geometric forms centered on the theme of nature with noble materials, which is evident here in the rectangular green-veined marble base topped by foxes in a sitting-standing posture, used to hold books in place with their patinated gray metal parts. The whole piece is absolutely fascinating, classy, and chic. Fox figures were rare during this period. They are stable and sturdy, in very good overall condition, perfect for enhancing your bookshelf with an Art Deco touch! Fast and careful shipping to France,
