Description

A large oil-on-canvas painting by Paul Rue, an iconic painter of the Crozant School, depicting a flock of sheep grazing on the hillsides overlooking the famous Creuse Valley. Dated 1918, this work delicately captures all the poetry of the Creuse landscapes that made this artistic movement famous. In a luminous composition, the artist depicts a shepherd leading his flock through a rolling landscape bathed in soft light. The successive planes, the bluish tones of the hills, and the warm hues of the meadows offer remarkable depth and perfectly capture the peaceful atmosphere of the Creuse countryside. Here, Paul Rue excels at capturing the variations in light and the nuances of nature, with the supple and sensitive touch characteristic of the painters of the Crozant School. This
