Description

French boiserie bookcase from the second half of the 19th century, originally commissioned as paneling for a music room in a castle beyond the Alps. Made of walnut for all visible and supporting parts, including all the period internal shelves, it is supported by a structure with back panels and structural parts in solid oak. The piece is distinguished by its wavy lines on both the front and sides, a rare feature. Above the large doors are hand-carved asymmetrical gables; the right section features iconographic elements dedicated to musical instruments, attesting to its original intended use. The curvature of the body and sides is faithfully reproduced by historic, heat-curved glass. The wainscoting is designed for study: it includes pull-out walnut drawers under the top of each module for consulting scores or large volumes, while the lower section houses internal drawers. The furniture currently has a horseshoe-shaped configuration following a modification that affected only the right side, making it deeper. Since the original back panel has been preserved in this section as well, the modification is easily reversible: the piece can be dismantled and returned to its original linear configuration or adapted to different configurations.
