Description

Elegant Art Deco desk in Rio rosewood - Circa 1930A very elegant Art Deco desk made of Rio rosewood, notable for the harmony of its lines and the exceptional quality of its veneer, with its warm, contrasting grain. Inspired by the aesthetics of the great transatlantic liners of the 1930s, it captivates with its top featuring generously rounded corners, a hallmark of the modern design of that era. Resting on a side cabinet that opens via four drawers, this desk offers practical storage space while maintaining a light and perfectly balanced silhouette. The keyholes and original silver-plated bronze handles, along with their keys, add an extra touch of refinement and attest to the care taken in its craftsmanship. The original varnish, beautifully preserved, has developed a deep patina over time that highlights the nobility of the Rio rosewood. The piece is in beautiful, well-worn condition, with a few subtle scratches from age that are perfectly consistent with its age and authenticity. With its harmonious proportions and timeless design, this desk will fit just as well in an Art Deco interior as in a contemporary setting, where it will bring warmth, character, and elegance. It is a high-quality piece, representative of the great French craftsmanship of the 1930s, combining functionality, understated elegance, and luxurious materials. A collector's desk that will appeal to Art Deco furniture enthusiasts, lovers of 20th-century design, and anyone seeking an authentic piece of furniture that is both decorative and perfectly suited for everyday use.
