Description

A rare and beautiful early 18th-century hunting scene presented in its period Bérain frame of gilded, carved wood with a patina; of a good size and perfectly suited for a doorhead or trumeau--its intended purpose. Meticulously executed and elegantly composed, this remarkable painting with its fresh colors has everything to charm; Freshly cleaned at a renowned Parisian workshop, the canvas has been lined and mounted on a new key-lock stretcher, then returned to its original frame; a genre painting very much in the Baroque spirit of the "Hunt with a Sparrowhawk," full of nobility, where animals and participants revel in a vivid natural setting with an enhanced, luminous sky. The scene features horses, a dog, men, and women sheltered by a graceful parasol--and, of
