Description

An elegant English mahogany chest of drawers in the Georgian style, dating from around 1820. Crafted from richly grained mahogany, this two-part chest of drawers exemplifies the refined proportions and timeless craftsmanship characteristic of the late Georgian period. The upper section consists of two small drawers surmounted by three large drawers of decreasing sizes, while the lower section features three full-width drawers of decreasing sizes, offering generous and practical storage space. The chest retains its lovely swan-neck-shaped brass handles, which highlight the warm patina of the mahogany, beautifully developed over the past two centuries. Its elegant proportions and clean Georgian lines make this chest of drawers an ideal piece for both classic and contemporary
